During the COVID-19 pandemic, the Placement Cell had to adapt its activities to a virtual format to continue supporting students in their career development and job placement efforts. Here's a draft of the activities that was implemented by the Placement Cell:

To introduce students to the placement process, available resources, and the changes due to COVID-19, the Cell hosted Virtual Orientation and Awareness Program. The session covered topics like Resume Building, Interview Skills and LinkedIn Optimization. Workshops on adapting to the changing job market and industry demands during the pandemic were also hosted during the year. The students were encouraged to build personal profiles and the Cell provided virtual assistance through Email and Google Meets for Profile Creation and other necessities.

Virtual Career Counselling and Guidance were provided during the year. The students were given personalized guidance regarding their career choices and placement preparation. The Cell took initiatives to connect students with industry professionals to gain insights and network. Continued placement activities through online platforms were facilitated. The Cell collaborated with companies to organize virtual job fairs where students were able to interact with recruiters. The Cell utilized online platforms for conducting placement drives, including aptitude tests, group discussions, and interviews.

The Cell encouraged students to use the lockdown period to upskill and gain relevant certifications and promoted online courses and certification programs related to their field of study.

These activities ensured that students were well-prepared and supported throughout their placement process despite the challenges posed by the COVID-19 pandemic.
